Le Sanglier French Restaurant

A Valley culinary institution for more than 47 years, Le Sanglier offers classic French cuisine as well as vegetarian and health-conscious choices. The restaurant features an elegant atmosphere and a knowledgeable and attentive staff managed by new owner Michael Khalatian—a third-generation restaurateur.

What can guests expect when they visit Le Sanglier?

“An elegant dining experience defined by exceptional cuisine. We strive to ensure our guests feel welcome and are not intimidated by something they may not have seen on many menus. I personally love to chat with my guests and offer suggestions and wine pairings if requested. I want to ensure that each guest has a memorable dining experience and leaves with a smile on their face.”

What are your favorite menu items?

“Our French onion soup cannot be beat. Our chocolate soufflé at the end of a meal is perfect for sharing. Duck à l’orange and Dover sole are musts. Our braised short ribs virtually melt in your mouth. Our signature dish is our wild boar chops. By the way, ‘le sanglier’ is French for ‘the wild boar.’”

What do loyal patrons like most about your restaurant?

“Consistently being able to sit down to a gourmet French meal in a quiet and intimate setting. When I acquired Le Sanglier in 2016, our client base wanted us to maintain our classic French dishes. We knew that continuity was very important to maintain, and we fortunate enough to retain the same talented chef and head maître d’. I am pleased to say that our loyal customers keep coming back. To stay up with trends toward health-conscious cuisine, we have added a number of dishes such as baked wild salmon with cherries and walnuts.”

Describe Le Sanglier’s dining style.

“This is Southern California, so although we have no formal dress code, the dining style is casual-elegance. The tenor of Le Sanglier and the wait staff is semi-formal, intimate, yet very friendly—the perfect destination for a romantic evening of epicurean delights or a quiet dinner shared with close friends or family. Fantastic food and wonderful wine set within an atmosphere free of stress make my job very easy.”
